The diagram illustrates a Soil Moisture Based Automated Irrigation System. It consists of the following components and connections:

- Soil Moisture Sensor: A sensor module with a probe, connected to the PIC16F877 microcontroller.
- PIC16F877: The central microcontroller unit that processes data from the sensor and controls the relay.
- Relay Module: A module that receives control signals from the PIC16F877 and switches the power to the water valve.
- Water Valve: A valve that controls the flow of water into the irrigation system.

The flow of water is indicated by a blue arrow pointing from the water valve towards the right. A photograph on the right side of the diagram shows the physical components of the system, including the sensor, microcontroller, and relay module, connected by wires.

2. Floodlights within stadium
3. Light rays travel out to roof
4. Floodlights are supplied by roof structure
5. Light rays are reflected
6. Floodlights are supplied by roof structure

4

- Increasing crop production by using precision irrigation system using wireless soil moisture sensors without manual intervention
- It reduces soil erosion by providing sufficient irrigation as per crop requirement
- It maintains soil fertility as there is no excess water provided to the crop

Research Methodology

Project Overview

- Objective: To develop a smart irrigation system using IoT technology.
- Scope: The system will be designed for a small-scale agricultural field.
- Timeline: The project is scheduled to be completed within 12 weeks.

7

Working of Soil Sensor

The sensor when installed in the field it checks the moisture percentage in the soil and sends the relevant data to the gateway controller which is connected to Internet at farmer's house.

The gateway controller checks if the soil moisture is suitable for the crop or not.

If it is not sufficient for the crop then it sends command to the automatic channel valve which is connected to the pipelines.

The control valve gets automatically open and remains open till the water need for the crop until it's full!!

FINDINGS AND SUGGESTIONS IN CURRENT PROCESS FLOW
FINDINGS	SUGGESTION
Current process flow not addressed customer demand because current lead time is 10 sec.	Need to introduce VSM tool to achieve lead time of 10 sec.
The lead time 3 days for loading and unloading and 2 days for heat treatment as per current process map.
According to the 100% respondents all parameters like more lead time, more cycle time, incurred more cost, improper material flow, less sale which is generated by waste like transportation, Extra processing and over processing in current process.	Need to reduce process flow in C-shape for single process flow. Reduces waste by removing non value added activities and reduce the cycle time up to time by making graphite coating online and eliminating grinding operation.
As per Pareto analysis Transportation, Extra processing and over processing in current process which has more impact on profit.	Need to reduce lead time loading and heat treatment process to achieve customer demand by reducing improper material flow.
Cost calculations show that the overall cost is 25.4% less for current process.	This outcome process need to install in house to save cost. For avoiding turning need to install in house.
Cost calculations show that the overall cost is 25.4% less for current process.	Need to reduce lead time loading and heat treatment process to achieve customer demand by reducing improper material flow.

PROBLEM STATEMENT

The company manufactures various types of forged parts for automotive sector.

Developing new warm forged level gear on 1350TP line at Rajmangron facility.

This current processes flow creates more lead time in production.

Focusing on reduction of lead time and improper material flow.

Relocate this 1350TP line to Baramati facility.

OBJECTIVES

- To study the lead time of warm forging processes.
- To analyze the causes of improper material flow and high cost.
- To develop the value stream mapping technique.
